

That's the story

kiwi stories for kiwi kids

newsletter seven september 2006

Holy Guacamole, what an enormous month, huge month, a hippopotamus of a month—yes, it was quite big!

In September 'That's The Story' had 39 winners that all together won over three thousand dollars worth of cash and prizes. Crikey, that's a lot of prizes... and one of those prizes was our first ever winner from the 'I Want One of Those' page. Well done Briana Otto, who won the Fisher Price Star Station Karaoke Machine. What a cool prize too. AND, speaking of cool prizes, there's six brand new toys on the 'I Want One of Those' page on the website. Have a look, take your pick, and you never know, you just might be October's winner.

Hopefully by now you've also all had a listen to the 'That's The Story' mystery voice on the Stories page too? If you can guess who the mystery voice is, you're in the draw to win an i-Pod Shuffle. Congratulations Caitlin King, who is September's winner. I hope that i-Pod Shuffle is getting plenty of use.

Keep your eye on the 'That's The Story' website. In November we've got a couple of really, really exciting things on the go especially for 'That's The Story' newsletter subscribers (that's you lot), but I'll let you know more about them in next month's newsletter.

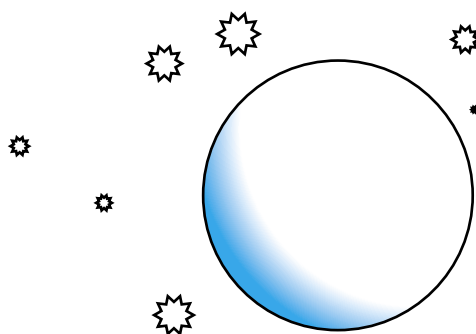

Hope you're having a fantastic time on your school hols AND don't forget your sunblock!
See ya next time.

Ronnie

Did you know?

- That when you look up at the moon, you are looking at an object that is 384,400 kilometres away. Phew, that's a long way.
- That a mouse is pregnant for 18-21 days, a human is pregnant for 265 days, a whale is pregnant for 10-17 months, and a poor, old elephant is pregnant for a whopping 20-22 months!
- That a cockroach can live for several weeks with its head cut off. It eventually dies from starvation. Gross!
- That about 75% of all species of animals living on Earth are insects. Hmmm...
