

Scavenger Hunt

This is good for the family with loads of kids! Make up lists of items for the children to find. If they're too young to read, simple drawings can take the place of word lists. Include easy and hard things on your list—a toothpick, change from the couch, a broken blue crayon, a matched pair of socks. A list of about 20 items can keep a child involved for a good hour or so. Of course, the winner and the "not first place" winners all get some kind of a prize—cupcakes anyone?
